The North Columbia Schoolhouse Cultural Center is a member supported non-profit arts and cultural center. We strive to uphold a long tradition of community service begun 135 years ago when our building was a one-room schoolhouse. We offer our space at an affordable cost to residents of the San Juan Ridge and provide programming that enhances our community life. We also provide resources to help local groups and individual artists in their creative undertakings and professional development. We cultivate an active volunteer base and membership, which sustains the vibrancy of the Cultural Center and preserves this rural historic site for future generations.

Because most residents in the area live 45 minutes or more from any other artistic or cultural venue, it is the objective of NCSCC to bring high quality artistic programs from out of the area to the Schoolhouse. To encourage and satisfy local interest in the arts of other cultures, we strive to present a wide range of art and performance groups, which represent a broader cultural diversity than is found in Nevada County. We expose our audiences to artists and performers who are not only important and innovative within their artistic fields, but rise to a rare level of excellence when presented in our unique setting.

Please renew or join now to support your Cultural Center!
